

POET Min/Max Program

- Establish a minimum floor price with a lower cost than a typical Min Price
- Known upside participation cap
- ZERO up front fees
- Final cash price can be locked in at any time prior to expiration
- Full cost is known at inception
- No double obligation required for this

How it works

Producer contracts a set quantity of bushels for any delivery window that he wants.

Using the underlying option market the cost of the underlying mechanism is deducted from the initial contract price. This establishes the minimum price component of the contract.

At any time prior to expiration the producer can elect to establish the final price by notifying POET during the Chicago Mercantile Exchange regular daytime pit trading hours. The producer then receives the net liquidated value of the underlying contract mechanism which is added to the minimum price value.

In order to receive the maximum contract value, final pricing would have to be done at expiration of the underlying option mechanism.
